'Not the right time' for Wie on PGA Tour

Hawaii's teen golf sensation Michelle Wie turned down a chance to play in a PGA Tour event, her father said Tuesday.

BJ. Wie said that his 13-year-old daughter, who Sunday became the youngest winner of a U.S. Golf Association adult event when she won the U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links Championship, was offered a sponsor's exemption into a PGA Tour event this summer. He wouldn't name the event.

"It's not the right time," he said. "It's too much for her."

Wie is in the midst of a lengthy golf trip that would get her back to Honolulu until just in time to return to start her freshman year at Punahou School. On the 20,000-mile trip, she will play in eight events, five against professionals.

She qualified for the U.S. Women's Open on June 9, then won the Pinehurst title. She is playing in the LPGA Stopher Classic starting Friday near Atlantic City and goes next week to the Women's Open near Portland, Ore. After two weeks off, the U.S. Girls' Junior Championship is July 21 at Fairfield, Conn. Another week off and she goes to the U.S. Women's Amateur at Philadelphia Country Club followed by the LPGA Jamie Farr Kroger Classic at Toledo, Ohio.

Just before Sun. 10 starts, she'll play in a Canadian Tour event, the Bay Mills Players' Championship at Brimley, Mich. After a few weeks at school, she'll play in the Nationwide Tour's Albertsons Boise (Idaho) Open.

Not much of a vacation.

"If you grow up normal, you'll only be normal," she said. "And I don't want to be normal. I want to be extraordinary."

▶ Jeff Sluman and Rocco Mediate combined for a 14-under-par 57 Tuesday and beat hosts Billy Andrade and Brad Faxon by a stroke at the CVS Charity Classic in Barrington, R.I. Sluman and Mediate, who had 12 birdies and an eagle, finished at 22-under 120 in the 36-hole better-ball event.

Racetrack to help fund Penguins new arena

The parent company of Mountaineer Race Track and Gaming Resort will put up $60 million to help the Pittsburgh Penguins pay their share of a proposed $278.3 million hockey arena. The Penguins' Mellon Arena home is the oldest and second-smallest NHL venue. Edson "Ted" Arneault, president and CEO of MTR Gaming Group, which owns the Chester, W.Va., facility, pledged the $60 million to the team in return for projected slot machine revenues at Keystone Downs, a Thoroughbred racetrack and casino he plans to build near Pittsburgh. The Penguins would receive the money in installments through the sale of seat licenses and naming rights to the new arena, or through other sources. Private sources would put up $107 million with the rest coming from public funds.

Sprinter Allyson Felix of Baptist (Los Angeles) is the Gatorade National High School Girls Track and Field Athlete of the Year. She won her third consecutive state 100-meter title and second 200 in a row and Sunday earned a spot on the U.S. team going to the world championships in Paris by finishing third in the 200 at the U.S. outdoor championships. ... Arizona Cardinals backup fullback Dennis McKinley and three other men were arrested Tuesday on charges stemming from a investigation into an international drug ring. Police say McKinley, who had his contract terminated by the Cardinals hours after his arrest, rented a warehouse where marijuana shipments from Mexico were stored for U.S. distribution.
